What to keep in mind

This year brings a lighter, more expressive mood: the year itself speaks to taste, creativity, and the pleasure of sharing what you make rather than just producing it. At the same time, it meets something fundamental in your original chart, creating a background note of friction under the surface — a reminder that growth this year may ask you to let go of an older version of stability. The ten-year period you're in doesn't line up smoothly with what best supports you right now, so the year's general tone is one where things can flow nicely on the surface while asking more effort underneath than it looks.

Minor Heat (July 7 – August 8)
This month repeats the year's main theme almost exactly — creativity, taste, enjoying the process — but at full strength, right in its own season. It's a good stretch for showing work, sharing a project, or putting something creative out into the world. The same friction with your foundational theme shows up here too, so it's worth pairing visibility with patience: good timing for making something known, less good for forcing old arrangements to stay exactly as they were.

Start of Winter (November 7 – December 7)
This is the most charged period of the year. Several tensions stack together at once, and the overall flavor is pressure that asks for decisive responses — competition, high stakes, situations where hesitation costs more than usual. It's worth preparing for this stretch ahead of time: finish what needs finishing in October, keep some reserve of energy and patience in hand, and avoid picking new fights if you can choose the timing. If a decision has been brewing, this is likely when it comes to a head — better handled with preparation than caught off guard.

Major Snow (December 7 – January 6)
A gentler note returns here — support from older or more experienced people, useful instruction, a sense of having somewhere reliable to return to. But it arrives alongside some shake-up in routine and daily structure. Good timing for seeking advice, consulting someone experienced, or formalizing a plan you've been studying — just don't expect your usual daily rhythm to stay perfectly steady while you do it.

The other months, briefly:

February–March: a supportive, almost parental tone, with minor friction in close personal matters.
March–April: intuitive and a little unconventional, with some daily friction.
April–May: an energizing stretch among strong, capable people; money may move faster than planned.
May–June: steady peer support, with some tension in personal or family matters.
June–July: talent shows itself by breaking from routine rather than following it; some internal friction likely.
August–September: steady income themes, with some disruption in close personal life.

This report is for reflection and planning and does not replace medical, legal or financial advice. Decisions remain yours.

September–October: opportunities arriving from several directions at once; watch for self-created friction in daily matters.
October–November: a structured, responsibility-driven feel, with day-to-day life pulled in a few directions.
January (next cycle): intuitive and independent-minded, with minor friction carrying over from the month before.

Three footholds for the year:
1. Rhythm — treat the summer months as your window for creative output and visibility, and keep autumn's start-of-winter stretch lighter on your calendar so you have room to respond rather than react.
2. Where to take care — close personal and daily-life matters surface repeatedly this year; small frictions at home or in routine are worth addressing early rather than letting them build.
3. Where there's room — guidance, study, and advice from someone more experienced land well this year, especially toward its end; it's a good year to ask for help rather than go it entirely alone.
